Obviously a well paired team. Don't take time off while your partner is speaking-- that time is for facial expressions and more visual engagement. Make the pregnancy scare less funny and more dramatic. You have a very dramatic piece and you do well in that space, so let your audience hold that sunken feeling the whole time. Your characterization of Anna's inner thoughts and mental illness is spectacular

Cecelia- fantastic job of portraying Anna, someone who is suffering from depression possibly bipolar good use of body movement around the room, voice projections was spot on and the work was memorized!! you guys seemed like old pro's when you gave your speech.

The introduction was funny and engaging.

The movements helped explain the depression character.

Great coordination of speakers. The speakers did a great job at indicating touching but not actually touching.

Break in speech emphasized the main topics.

Climax was indicated with more emotions.

Excellent facial expressions--intensely emotional throughout the duration of the speech. Your voice also conveyed the emotional climax of your piece.

Your gestures were large and bold--I love that! They did feel a little practiced, so loosening the gestures a bit may help. It's up to you, though!

Your eye contact and blocking stick out to me. You really seemed to connect with this piece and it showed. You captivated the audience and took us on a journey. Fantastic job!

Good eye contact during intro.

You have a couple very rigid shifts in emotion, it was a very abrupt shift into the build portion of the speech, you need to take time to let the first emotion set in before your character really shows the side of her that is dramatic.

The shift from the build to the climax was really smooth.

It's only the beginning of the season, and you already have the start of some really good blocking, it just needs to have a little more visualization of the characters' thoughts.

Full circle loop of the heart beating 412 million times was good, I like the cutting.

Keep working at it, and let the audience feel your character! Good luck this season!

Good enunciation

work on slowing down and adding pauses - this can come when you become more comfortable with the piece

Work on vocal variation

Especially when in a small room like this you can vary the volume and inflection

Once you get memorized and start to include hand gestures and eye contact this piece could be very good

Your volume is great!

Don't be afraid to really use the room! You stayed in the same place the entire speech, so be mindful of this.

Memorizing your speech is so important! I am excited for you as you move forward and have it memorized. Looking up and down does take away from how you present and the emotion you're able to display. I ranked you where I did because of this.

I think you have natural facial expressions that fit what you're talking about. So well done with that:)

Be careful of talking too fast. Let yourself sit on phrases and slow down for emphasis.

I would plan some blocking; I think you have some content that could be brought even more to life with this.

You do a great job with engaging the audience, but would love to see more movement and think memorization will help with this.

Don't be afraid to make eye contact with the judge and try to lengthen your speech. I think slowing down might help.

Overall, good job and good luck to you:)

- Love the different voices you are able to make + your transitions are really good and clean

- Great flow of speech and memorization

- Very good diction, differentiation of characters and emotion, and emphasis on jokes or important parts of the speech

- Love the energy you brought in today!

- Try to not rush your jokes so they are clear and hit the audience well

- Try to use the room more if possible

- Awesome job on staying clear with your words, understandable, and not stumbling when it came to the faster parts of your speech! thats not an easy thing to do :)

Great volume! You have a powerful voice and are easy to listen to. Keep developing your rate of speaking and use of emphasis to really hit those impactful lines and jokes. Incorporate some meaningful pauses and let your audience digest key points.

Be careful of nervous movements! You have such a confident performance style that side-stepping or nervous movements can be distracting.

Strong start--so well synchronized both vocally and physically. Informative intro--good overview as well as impact statement. Clear characterizations--both in fantasy and reality. The shark could actually be more menacing--take it up a notch. Especially well coordinated physicality/choreography. Lots of heavy breathing and angst involved--maybe try for more subtlety and nuance? Affecting and poignant conclusion. Confident and animated performance--nice job in the round.

Vocals were very good. Volume was excellent. Tone was very good. Rate was quick. When reading the cards, you lost some word pronunciation. Hand gestures were pretty good. You could only use the one because of your note cards. Facial gestures need some work. Mirror practice always helped me.

Emotionally, this was an excellent performance, but uneven at times. It's early in the season; cleaning it up is still possible. Hand gestures matched your vocal performance. Not an easy task, but you seem to have that ability. Very good job.

Use of note cards automatically places you at the bottom of the round. Memorize this and you'll be higher. Seriously, this is an interesting piece. It ended a little abruptly, but was still interesting. Keep on!

I loved how you used the WHOLE room at the beginning. This definitely set you apart.

Great eye contact. And your characterization in minutes 1-2 is GREAT.

I think you make your argument apparent, and can feel your passion toward the subject. This helps make your speech impactful.

Be sure to know your sources, probably a few more reads through and you'll get this since you definitely knew them.

As you go throughout the piece, I like how you still use the room.

Be confident when you sing! I loved this part, but felt like you were a tad hesitant; it's great so keep pushing it!

I feel like you can emphasize your shift to different people in your pieces even more. I think you do this well, but want to encourage you to continue creating more distinction.

I think you can stretch the length by slowing down in certain areas, but overall this was so engaging and I thought you did a fantastic job with the overall flow.

Great vocal projection. Great eye contact. You looked at me and the others in the room. I like your boards with visual additions to what you are speaking. Work on finalizing your memorization...that is the only thing that held you back today on scores. Love the Laika story which I have never heard. Do you have to say "quote" and "unquote"? It seems unnecessary and distracting. I was very much listening to your speech that I forgot the 2 minute prompt. The only thing holding you back is just memorization. You have great stage presence. Keep up the good work. I really liked your presentation! Memorization was the ONLY thing that held you back today.

Hi Rachel,

I like the visual aid, but I do think the "knowledge is power" board could be a quote or text more specific to your topic.

You have a great confidence as you speak, as well as a good pace and volume. My biggest advice is to get memorized, because your speech will be so much more engaging and you will connect to the audience much more once you can work on movement, hand gestures, solid eye contact/focal points and such. I would also like to hear a clear differentiation between the different sections of your speech once you're more comfortable.

Your performance was very easy to listen to and watch, just keep practicing, perfecting and memorizing! :)

There are a couple little stumbles, but not a biggie rn.

I respect having the notecards this early in the season, but you seem to have it like 85% memorized and glancing at the notcard to remind you where you are is super detrimental to your rank (reading or having script I have to rank you under everyone that does it memorized). Some really bad stumbles is okay because that stuff happens all the time.

You thought you made a mistake from what you were supposed to say and stopped and that is the only way I would have known because it sounded okay (I don't have your script so if you keep going and pretend it never happened then 9/10 times the judge won't either).

You speak so clearly and have such good diction, phenomenal. You do a good job with the eyecontact and then

I am a little confused as this is a dec round and your speech seems like an oo. You make a comment about after the round in the conclusion, I feel that would not be present in a dec round. I also did not hear an intro where you say who the speech is by if this is supposed to be a dec.

Overall you did really good, ditch the notecard and yes there will be some stumbles but that's okay. Also see about going to oo or perhaps your coach registered you in the wrong room (it's not being counted against you for rank with me, but just for future reference)

Things to work on:

- Memorize the speech
- Try to calm down -- you seemed very nervous
- enunciate more clearly (relaxing the nerves will help)
- vary your rate, volume, tone, and pitch, rather than speaking in monotone, and at the same speed and volume
- try to make direct eye contact with each audience member rather than looking at back wall
- try to move about the room -- you were planted in one place the whole time
- you had your hand in your pocket in the beginning -- take it out, use your hands to express yourself -- showing, rather than hiding, your hands will make a more engaging and open speaker
- see if you can display more enthusiasm and energy

Things you did well

- You did a good job using hand gestures, but sometimes the hand gestures seemed a bit stiff and unnatural
- good job hanging in there the whole time
