-I really liked the addition of a heartbeat until it says "until it gets the message it needs to stop".

-Also, when I judged you last, I think I totally just must have been looking down when you introduced it-it does translate that the crouching is an open casket.

-There are some awkward pauses in between your words in your intro. These sentences should be fluid, pauses where a comma should go. There was some additional ones that interrupted your flow. I did like the intro though, provides good context.

-I like the transition to "five years old, we were in kindergarten!"

-Maybe a character on "sorry girls, time to join the class?"

-I almost would have liked to see "FRANNIE" screamed before you said the you were dead for two whole days. I just think right after you're talking about the fish drowning in open air, screaming her name like you're picturing her drowning might be an impactful touch.

RFR: Of the competitors in this round, I felt that you created a character that was the most realistic and drew me in to your performance.

spoke loud and clear and engaged well with audience and eye contact gave a good intro into what her piece was about.

started off with good body language and hands expression to show actions of the characters

used space of the stage to show feelings and actions

voice tone is great and loud

kinda spoke a little too fast at times got very expressive and actions to make me feel like the character was feeling.

maintained good eye contact thru out the piece topic kinda lingered and lost audience attention.

- I like the energy in your voice
- jokes can be said more loosely and casual to connect with the audience more
- would like more hand gestures. sometimes you have small ones, but sometimes they don't seem intentional as they are made below the waist
- be intentional with eye contact, sometimes you would talk to people who aren't here, which is cool since there aren't a lot of people in the round, but make sure important lines are said to audience that is here

I liked your performance. You are very professional and have good energy. You placed 3rd in the round overall because I felt as though they connected better with the audience. For your jokes, don't be afraid to speak to the audience more casually. While you do this a little,, I can tell that they are very rehearsed and kind of stiff

Seems like you briefly forgot your lines a few times during your intro

Fantastic line delivery; you did a great job hitting the humorous parts of the speech

RFR: Really great and entertaining performance. It was a tough decision between the top two. I felt the 1 had better use of dynamics in terms of vocality; you were very "over-the-top" throughout the speech, which was very entertaining but I think toning it down where appropriate would make your performance sound more natural.

Mental Health-Very comfortable and good eye contact. I like the inflection of your voice to make points. Good use of space and body language. Kept my attention and Flow was good. I like the use of your resources to make your point. Slight hesitation once but recovered well. Good facial expressions when making your points or to show different points of view. Good example of supply and demand, lol. You did very well and almost got the one,

Things you did well: Very good enunciation and volume throughout the piece. You did a really nice job moving between characters/pieces, etc. You had a great use of movement, volume, rate and tone that really brought feeling to the piece.

Things to improve on: You had a couple spots where you tripped over your words or had to go back and repeat. There were parts where I didn't follow from piece to piece.

I gave you the rank of 3 because you need to make sure the organization and switching between subjects are more crisp and also watch your rate so that you do not stumble over your words.

Good use of your hands.

The tempo of your information being presented was a tad slow.

Try to be mindful of your volume level trailing off at the end of your sentences.

your intro was kind of hard to follow

Q: can lake win AZ senate state

Trump supp, weak, polling well

Good movement, 2020 is too old for this question, sometimes you had good vocabulary which elevated your speaking level. Glad you used the star player reference

Low election rate for senators, got repetitive, thank you for citing your references, don't use unprofessional phrases

Youre 3rd point was definitely you best point...make sure to compare that to the low senate reelection rates, you seem to really be struggling here

Conc: good game, opp, star players

The main reason you got 3rd instead of second is because the second speaker was a better speaker than you and their time was closer to the goal.

A Nice Family Gathering - Really strong right from the start and kept that energy all the way through. The differing voices were amusing and unique from each other which made for distinguishable characters that were easy to follow. The dad character was funny and sounded like Gomez. Most of your sound effects were convincing too. It was a difficult decision to choose between first and second. You received this rank because your competitor was a bit more animated with facial expressions, character voices and physical comedy.

Characterization:

Great job embodying the characters – not just vocally, but also emotionally – you were really able to capture the personality of each character. Between the father and the main character – there's not that big of a difference in terms of the postures of the characters, so try to emphasize that a bit more – for example, maybe try squatting for one of the characters (your other characters are pretty distinct in this aspect)

Vocal:

Great use of different voices! Especially with the mom and dad – you definitely showed that you have a great range of pitch

Good pacing – and you did a great job of varying it between different characters and different scenes

You have a good projecting voice, but you tend to use a louder voice most of the time (which isn't a bad thing – it's easy to hear what you're saying), but add some softer/lower volume voices – for a character or add softer/more dramatic points (like at the ten minute point at the end)

Physical:

Good control of the physical space around you – I like that you walked around the space!

Good motions when you're acting out different tasks – like cutting the food or doing the "foot" part – but try and make the motions more exaggerated

You have a great opening door noise

- Character differentiation at the start is clear and obvious. Blocking seems good, though I am not entirely sure what the dad is doing when he is coming to life. Is he stepping out of a photograph? If there is any line that explains what specifically this blocking is doing, I would try to include it
- Good facial expressions
- Good sounds to narrate actions
- I love how judgmental the son is at times. I would recommend making it even more obvious when he asks his dad why him doing this would be any different than his dad doing it
- The doctor character is great, as is Jerry
- The mom's voice was a bit strained at times. The voice works well, but you could change it to something more comfortable without it taking away
- Plot was pretty clear throughout for the most part, easy to follow
- Reason for rank: Character differentiation and variation were impressive and enhanced the speech a lot. The plot was easy to follow and comical. You did a great job, and I only have a few recommendations
