Andrew--you did a really great job tackling a tough question.

The overuse of the word "assert" occurred as well as quite a few "ums", but your overall comfort of the topic prevailed. You had excellent referrals of HHS, EPA, and the Department of Transportation, all of which demonstrated your research.

There were some glaring stumbles with the 3rd supporting statement and the government's duty to its citizens/popular sovereignty.

You have a great bank of knowledge about the East Palestine train derailment, which you presented well. The pattern was tough to follow at times, leading to your ranking today of 4th.

I could tell that you were nervous when you came in. Try taking a deep breath to collect yourself before you speak. You have a good basic structure with all of the elements. 3 points, citations and a reasonable wrap up. Your points needed to be supported a bit better with your research. Point number 3 in particular was difficult to discern. Also, one of your citations was from Jan 10 of this year. Today is January 6. Overall, nice structure, good elements, just give it a little more information to connect with the audience. This is why I am giving you the 5.

Like the way you use your shoulders to demonstrate pulse - in and out, and the pulsing on your chest is a good sound. Your physical expressions are well timed and helpful to telling your story. The swim coach, the aquarium person - as examples.

Your use of Susie's voice was good and differentiated from your Intro well. Your differentiation between disappointed, sad, angry are good.

The intensity of the response to not knowing for 2 days was really nice - Mom could be slower and more gentle for telling a kid.

You held the pose of looking at Franny in the casket well throughout and also brought that sad and angry voice back each time. The intensity of the number of beats at the end is poignant.

I love jellyfish. I hope your entire cut is about jellyfish. They are so pretty.

Good rhythm on your thumping. I really liked that segment. Your hair flipped up after your chin dip and stayed stuck for a bit there. It fell back down after a few seconds.

"I had disappeared completely" feels like it might not be portrayed by you in the same tone the writing is in. You speak it like it's a point of pride, it feels like if the narrator is really proud of it, it might be less of a loud-proud brag and more of a sneaky brag.

Dang I miss Frannie and I never even met her.

The transitions between current narrator and flashback narrator are clean and clear and the flashbacks are immersive. "And you smile." Another point where I feel your portrayal is off-tone.

"The kind of doctor you could talk to" feels like a missed opportunity for another dimension to your character, like a little sarcasm.

Shark part, you backed up so much you activated the SmartBoard in the classroom. Remember to stay aware of your physical space, you don't want us looking at something you bumped into instead of at you.

This isn't a ranking element, but I did enjoy how your cut had so much water-related imagery (aquarium, swimming lessons, drowning) and your suit is a blue-green.

"You were such a good swimmer"

"I don't want to talk about it" you're raising your voice at this point but saying you don't want to talk about it? Is there a way to convey a more sublime rage?

I liked your body movements, hand gestures and voice modulations.

I liked your eye connection that you maintained when you introduced your topic -created strong engagement. However, consider creating that connect with everyone in the audience, and not just 1 or 2 people.

I really liked your energy in the 2nd half of the speech. I felt that was not as consistent throughout.

Pay a little more attention to your physicality and gestures to further express the character's emotions.

Overall good job!

Delivery on the line "Just shoot me in the other leg and I'll be symmetrical" was hilarious and very well done.

Your pacing before the intro felt like a lot, personally, I didn't think that the pre-intro required this much movement. I would have loved to have seen you walk to the middle for your intro.

Your delivery of jokes was fantastic.

Volume and eye contact are great throughout your piece.

You kept your hands up for most of the beginning of your speech, I would focus on feeling comfortable with keeping your hands by your sides. As your piece went on you fixed this, but it's just something to keep in mind.

"Marco, polo" and "pants were snakes" were both lines that were very well delivered.

Great pacing with your speech throughout. I didn't feel like you were ever talking too slowly or too fast.

Toward the end, just like the beginning of your piece, I felt like there was a lot of movement that didn't necessarily add anything to the speech. This didn't affect your ranking at all it is just something to keep in mind for more competitive rounds.

Your delivery was easily the best in the round :)

Your topic was nice, but it would have been nice if you could have memorized at least some parts of the speech. That would have enabled you to have some eye connect with the audience and would have created more of an impact.

Overall, I liked the topic and the references you gave. Your vocal variations and modulations were really nice.

The variety of sources cited demonstrated thorough research and a commitment to accuracy. Consider slowing down your pace a little, seemed like you were tripping on some words.

Consider expanding the acronyms - you said i.e but maybe you should have said 'for example'. You also used 'cough cough' in the Elon Musk example. You could have demonstrated that by actually coughing to create more impact.

Enron as a topic--different and intriguing!

Good roadmap. Good background info on ENRON given--this is good.

Strong voice and inflection in voice. This makes me care about your topic even more! This is a strong point in your speech.

Good explanation of mark-to-market and other unknown terms.

Rate of speech: Slow down the rate of speech a bit when speaking about certain specialized terms to allow the judge to understand everything you are saying. Sometimes stumbled over words due to trying to speak too fast.

Good transitions to the next points.

Body language: Watch the swaying of legs as you are speaking

I think instead of information about imprisonment, I think adding more information about what all they did wrong. Slow down the speech to be able to make sure this information gets across.

I think you have an original topic and with some polishing in organization and a bit more information in some areas, you'll be even better off.

I gave the 4 due to your ability to speak and engage the audience with your speech without even using visual aids. Your inflection, volume, and enthusiasm shine through your speaking.

Good vocal variety and pace. Try not to move around so much during your intro. Make sure that all of your movements have a purpose. Don't be afraid to make eye contact. You looked up at the ceiling a lot during your speech. Try not to shift your weight back and forth so much, it is distracting. This is a good piece. Your presentation style is engaging, voice tones, pauses and body movements are enhancing your speech. The one area where you can improve is eye contact. Keep eye contact with the audience. That is way you maintain conversation. Otherwise it feels like you are trying to remember your speech or you are nervous and takes away from your presentation impact.

Your enunciations and speech clarity is good. What I would like to see more is emotions and passion with the speech. It feels very well rehearsed speech rather than speech that you feel passionate about and are trying to make your own. This is the balance you have to maintain in this category.

Overall really good job. Keep working on the points I have mentioned. All the best!

I love this speakers energy and how they use the heroic inflections that match the theme. They made use of different voices and accents and flips back and forth between characters smoothly. I would just caution to watch the speed. The intro and the more dramatic scene between the two characters later in the piece were spoken very fast. It can be hard for the listener to keep up with the exchange when it is spoken so fast.

FANTASTIC delivery. You have a very instinctual way of delivering lines that is engaging and easy to listen to/watch.

I do think that at the beginning you were going a little fast, specifically during your intro, but other than that you used the time very appropriately and paced your piece well.

I think you could be even bigger on the voices and definitely be more consistent with accents; keep working on it! They are already good but you can develop them even further!

Nice stereo sound on the intro. This offers some layers to the context of the message you are sharing. The dialogue at put put was delivered very well. The internal depression conversation against the relationship with Rob was demonic, and powerful. The staying on the planet scene is difficult to watch and that means you performed it well, communicating the seriousness of the mental issue. The holding hands at "figure this out line" I like how you acted like there was a magnetic repellent that kept your hands from actually touching. Again, very deep and layered. you aren't really using your binder in a creative way memorization could use a little work; there were a few stumbles

it's an aggressive topic, but that doesn't mean you need to present it so aggressively; the tone was the same the whole way through, where is you relaxed it a little in some places it may make it more impactful; instead it felt like an aggressive monotone

You earned a rank of 4 for the following reasons

Great balance of using the book and looking at the audience-good eye contact

Great energy and use of voice inflections and variations to add to your speech.

Good gestures

one small suggestion-be mindful of your blocks to make the transitions between selections clear.

Be mindful of your voice volume-you do not want to shout at your audience.

Comments

Comfortable use of the binder, but not in an interesting way as a prop. Lots of characters, and often difficult to follow the transitions between them. Perhaps more obvious body language, volume changes, use of space, or use of accents would be useful. That is the area of opportunity and the primary reason for your rank. Appropriate volume for the room. Good enunciation, inflection, and variation in pitch.

Great vocals good character voicing, and movement. The way you cut the pieces and weaved them together is very well done.

- Home renovation intro is great comparison to the topic
- Just a little bit of stuttering, try to speak with more confidence
- When you're citing your sources, try to include the date of the article you use
- Your argument was very well supported
- Your hand gestures were very repetitive and distracting. Try to use less hand gestures and
- Your points are very strong and credible, just try to speak with more confidence! It would help with the stuttering and other problems

Good volume and enunciation. You pace, however, was very choppy. I think was because you were struggle to remember some parts.

I wasn't as smooth as it should have been.

I think you did a good job of writing the speech and you had plenty of citations.

I like how you opened with an anecdote and wrapped it up with it. Some people forget to do that.

Should CT recuse himself from the case of DT ballot case? YES

Close times jan 6, previous recusals, other justices have ties.

1.Close times - Virginia Thomas - condoned the riots NYP - Project 2025 - VT consulting firms is involved and $ Benefit - trump could win - and give VT the best chance for earning money. He can't judge fairly

2. In the past he recused - Guardian and reuters - point out he has recused before. He himself acknowledges.

3. Other justices are not safe either - - Sun says - the justices were appointed by Trump - have made conservatives decisions - least balanced court ever

Con - Could make it more fair if trump recuses.

Clear points and you had evidence - but sometime you struggled making it connect to your point.

You did seem to be nervous and lack some confidence, I am not sure why - you know what you were talking about. Just don't rush - or get make at yourself when you stumble. Take a deep breath and just correct.

I really liked your AGD - I wish you would have referred to it in conclusion, but it was adequately linked to to your thesis and made sense for the topic.

The reason I ranked you as 4 was due to the evidence that was not always clearly linked to the topic and parts were you stumbled and got lost. You had a hard time recovering.
